During his career, Mr. LeCato has managed nearly all aspects of EMS transportation programs including operations management, sales & marketing, billing, public relations and quality assurance. It is this experience base that makes Jerry a natural candidate to communicate HSI's product features with new clients, because he understands their needs. "Because I've worked as both an operator and a manager of billing and revenue cycle, I am able to hear what our clients want and need and translate that into efficient operational processes to assist the HSI teams with consistent delivery and accurate results," comments Mr. LeCato. "Our service is to manage billing and collections and it is particularly critical when working with prospective clients that we fully understand their expectations, capabilities, and limitations so that we can meet their every need consistently."

Michael Franks, CEO of HSI says, "The value of our software suite is so compelling, it drives a win-win-win scenario with new clients. Even with HSI's performance based fee our clients are much further ahead with us, as they can focus on their business, save the costs of operating their own medical billing operation, and benefit from faster collections, higher net revenue per activity, and total insight and control of their operation. They are more profitable with us than without us."
